HEALTHY WORKPLACE RELATIONSHIPS

Carroll Worrell-Barnes, Early Childhood Coordinator

The average person spends over 90,000 hours at work in their lifetime. We generally spend more time with people at work than we do with anyone else in our lives. Therefore, it is important to build and maintain successful work relationships. This doesn't mean you have to be "BFFs" with everyone at work; it just means that the importance of teamwork, mutual trust, and camaraderie can help you and (your coworkers) to thrive...not merely survive! Situations beyond your control will happen everyone must do their part!

Come let's talk about it.

RETHINKING FREE CHOICE PLAY

Carroll Worrell-Barnes, Early Childhood Coordinator

Free Choice Play, also known as unstructured play, is defined as play motivated by children's own desires, curiosity and is guided by their own mental rules. However, studies prove intentional input from teachers sets critical guidelines for cognitive, social-emotional, physical, and language learning. Children willingly engage in free play as teachers strategically steer with purposeful intent. Join us for a refreshing perspective to play and helping children achieve developmentally appropriate goals.

Sonia Sumner, Regional Behavioral Specialist, Region 2

Teachers who care for children with behavioral difficulties, often find themselves reacting in ways that reinforce the behavior and make it worse. Behavioral intervention strategies are planned responses to behaviors that help teachers prepare for situations in which past responses have not been successful. This session focuses on helping participants develop new responses to challenging behaviors using six key intervention strategies.

Studies show teachers can help expand a child's vocabulary and development primarily through conversations with them about things in their world.
